I have known Graham Daniels as a close family friend and mentor, for the past four years.

I first met Graham through the Salvation Army where we both attended church. There I established a relationship with him and his family that has since developed into the relationship that I treasure and value today.

Graham is someone that I can turn to in seeking advice regarding any topic and know that he will listen. Graham is trustworthy and loyal, and has proven to be a man of great knowledge and wisdom.

One of the many qualities I admire in Graham is his family values, whom his commitment to is of the highest order. Grahams family life is an area in which he demonstrates great leadership qualities built on strong biblical values, of which the fruits are evident daily. He is someone in whom I have an enormous amount of respect.

Accordingly, having such a relationship with Graham and his family, I believe puts me in a very good position to provide an accurate observation of his character.

Sincerely,
