To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to strongly commend Graham Daniels to you for your favourable consideration. Having known Graham and his family for about eighteen years, I count it a privilege to offer words of reference and recommendation.

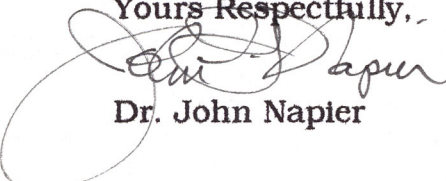

I first came to know Graham while serving as Senior Lecturer at the Adelaide College of Ministries. In conjunction with responsibilities at the college, I also assisted the ministry team at Edwardstown Baptist Church. Graham was a dedicated member in the church and a man known for his integrity and commitment to high ethical standards. Throughout the years, as I have shared with the family in numerous contexts, I have observed his continued commitment to the values of honesty, integrity, loyalty to family and civic responsibility.

Anyone who knows Graham will attest that he is a man of his word. In a day and age when such integrity is wanting in many spheres, one finds this quality shining through the many strengths of his character. Whether addressing a business convention, challenging other entrepreneurs, advising government officials or navigating various international connections, Graham's personable manner and solid character bring dividends. His expertise in the business world is highly respected. And when one encounters Graham on the polo grounds, one knows he is meeting an able and highly motivated competitor.

When Graham speaks, people listen. The reason? Graham's commitment to excellence, his fresh style of presentation, his heart-felt dedication to the causes he espouses and his strength of character undergird his life and work. His love for his family, his Christian faith and his deep appreciation of the values that have made Australia great continue to inspire him.

Again, I give Graham my highest recommendation. I strongly commend Graham to you for your most favourable consideration.

Yours Respectfully,

Dr. John Napier
